

U. S. AGENTS SEIZE ALKY PLANT

Giant Still on Waldvogel Farm Raided Two Weeks Ago Starts Up Again And Is Seized By U. S. Agents Wed. Night

The big alcohol still which was raided on the John Waldvogel farm three miles east of Frankfort about three weeks ago by State's Attorney Rehn of Will County, has opened up again in full blast and was seized in a raid by U. S. Prohibition men Wednesday night. The federal men came early in the evening and were at the Larson garage at the four corners north of Frankfort for a little while and then went to the road house east of Frankfort on the Lincoln Highway. They saw a big big truck drive by and followed it. The truck drove into the Waldvogel yard and headed for the big barn where the still is housed. A Negro was driving the truck but he got away. The federal men found the truck loaded with sugar. Several men were seized in the raid. The alky plant is under guard of the federal men now.

The vats and other equipment seized by the Will County officials was sold for $400 and was bought by a man connected with the alky plant it is reported. The vats and other equipment were not removed from the barn so it was only a matter of plugging up the holes that were bored in the vats and starting up a new batch of mash. When the Prohibition Agents seized the plant the vats were all full to the brim. In all about 69,000 gallons of mash was found. This still has been now raided for the third time. It ought to be three times and out.

Powerful gangs are back of this or the law would not be so persistently defied.

Million Dollars To Be Spent on McCord Farm

The farmers of Palos are rapidly yielding before the onslaughts of city interests. Ten thousand or more acres of the Palos Township are now Forest Preserve. Country Clubs whose chief attraction is their golf courses own hundreds of acres more. Surveyors are busy dividing large acreages into building lots.

One of the last large farms is the 235 acre farm which has been the property of the McCord family for 75 years or more. This farm is beautifully situated on one of the highest parts of the Palos Hills, lying just southwest of the village of Palos Park. From the top of the rolling hills one may look off for miles in any direction.

This farm has become the property of a Country Club modeled after an English Country Club and here The HORSE, not golf will reign supreme. True the Club will boast two golf courses but they will be incidentals only to his majesty, The HORSE.

It is reported that $1,000,000 are to be spent on the buildings and the grounds which will include a main club house, a club house for men only, a swimming pool, tennis courts, stables, a polo field, etc.

The purchase price of this farm is said to be $338,000. Two of the men interested in the club are M. J. Flynn of Palos Park, president of the Inland Rubber Co., and John Carroll, president of the Hyde Park Bank.

Mokena School Principal Resigns

Prof. Wm. N. Lathrop, principal of the Mokena Public School, tendered his resignation to the Mokena school Board at their meeting last Saturday night. Prof. Lathrop gives as his reason for resigning that he wants a steady job where he does not have to be thinking of moving every few years. He is now employed in the drafting department of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The school board is now receiving applications for the principalship vacancy.

Mokena to Spend Thousands In Big Paving Program

The first move in the street paving program of the Mokena village board calling for an expenditure of thousands of dollars to be paid by property owners by special assessment, was made Wednesday night when the board passed an ordinance creating a board of Local Improvements. The same members comprising the village board comprise the new board which is to meet August 11 at 7:30 p. m., at the village hall to consider and recommend the streets to be paved. The property owners on such streets to be improved will be given an opportunity to approve or disapprove such recommendations.

All the streets in the village with the exception of the Front street, which is used the most, are to come under the paving program, also the streets bordering the new school site which will greatly improve this piece of property. The Front street is full of chuck holes and ruts now but is being passed up in the paving program for the time being. This street was surfaced several years ago at a cost of $7,000 and has been a fizzle from the start. This was about the poorest bit of road building ever done in Mokena.

Green Garden Chicken Thieves Drop Loot

Chicken thieves operated in Green Garden last Sunday night but hastily dropped their loot consisting of two bags of chickens along side the highway when they were pursued.

Wm. Bettenhausen was at home and heard a big commotion in the farm yard of Carl Bettenhausen across the street. The latter family had gone to the Evangelical Sunday school picnic at Frankfort, Mr. Bettenhausen having hurt his knee the other day, was unable to leave his home to see what was going on in his neighbor's yard. He called Wm. Sippel, residing on an adjoining farm, and told him what was going on. Mr. Sippel and his son got in their car and quickly headed for the Carl Bettenhausen farm. When near by, Mr. Sippel's son saw two dark objects lying along side the road and called his father's attention to it. Mr. Sippel not being armed and not wishing to take any chances, drove on to the Wm. Bettenhausen farm, got a gun and headed for the Carl Bettenhausen farm. On the way he saw a car standing at the next corner. When he approached the driver of the other car tooted his horn and drove away. Mr. Sippel stopped and looked alongside the road for the objects his son had seen, and found two big bags full of chickens which the chicken thieves had dropped in their hurry to get away.

Frankfort M. E. to Picnic Aug. 3rd

The Frankfort M. E. Sunday school will hold their annual picnic at the Borman grove Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 3rd. All the pupils and teachers come in for a free dish of ice cream. All are welcome.

MOKENA WOMAN INJURED BY FALL AT NEW LENOX
Mrs. Lizzie Moriarty of Mokena who has been taking care of the David Lockwood home at New Lenox while the family was away on a vacation trip, met with a serious accident one day last week when she fell and injured her knee so that she is unable to be about. An X-ray has been taken.

Vice Flaunts Scarlet Robe

Disorderly Joint Raided Saturday Night; Open Again

Vice has flaunted its scarlet robe in the face of decency in Frankfort township for the past several weeks until it reached such a stage that Deputies from the Will County Sheriff's office raided a house of ill fame which has been operating in the farm house on the Peter Scheer farm north of Frankfort and only a short distance from the Borman picnic grove.

Deputies John Jenco and Lindgren raided the joint Saturday night about 8 o'clock and arrested four women and two men who gave their names as follows, but which most likely are fictitious: Florence Callahan, Margaret Clements, Willa Baker, Evelyn Adams, Tony Long and Nicolas Pomais.

The Baker woman who said she was from Chicago was the keeper of the house and, was fined $200 and costs when arraigned before Judge Casey in Joliet. The other inmates were fined $25 and costs. Judge Casey ordered them to leave Will County at once which they promised to do.

It is said a man by the name of Francis rented the house from Herman Barlewort who rented the farm last spring. The roadhouse harbored girls at one time but it is thought girls at one time but it is thought the present operators were afraid of being hauled in so the outfit caught, has been operating separately. The road house in question was raided sometime ago and closed for violation of the Prohibition act. Murder was also committed there at one time. So it has been in a notorious class by itself.

The house of ill fame was in full blast every night and on the Fourth of July, eight women inmates are said to have been on the place. Young men attending the picnics at the grove are said to have frequented this place which is said to have literally coined money. Autos were seen coming out of this farm yard as late as three and four o'clock in the morning. In fact the place was simply wide open. It is said the place was lit up from cellar to garret at night and was doing a thriving business. Negroes are also said to have been frequenting this joint.

Altho this place was raided Saturday night, it is reported to have been in full blast again Sunday.

It is an outrage that such a hell hole is allowed to exist to debauch the young men of this township and to ruin the lives of innocent girls. Are you parents of Frankfort going to allow such rotten conditions to exist in your midst? Do you care anything at all for the welfare of your children? What about our township officials, churches and organizations that should stand for decency, are they all going to sit idly by, and let such imps of hell to run as long as this gang has, before they were raided? Why wink at vice. Clean up these cancer spots before they get a chance to spread out their fibers of vice in the community.

Frankfort township has become very notorious of late for flagrant law violations. First the illicit brewery caused a surprise. Now recently a giant alcohol still was found in a barn only 3 miles from Frankfort, and now the latest in the form of a house of ill fame. There is something radically wrong in Frankfort township that such things can spring up and thrive. Evidently law and order are breaking down or else such conditions would be eradicated very quickly and not allowed to get a good start.

Let the churches and the decent people of the community take a stand to clean up all rotten conditions. Make it so hot for these agents of old Beelzebub, that they will stir shy of this section.

Farewell Tendered Orland Priest

A farewell reception, in honor of Rev. E. J. Zurlinden, S. J., was held by the parishioners and friends in St. Michael's Assembly Hall.

The Hall, with its bowls of variegated flowers on each little table, its walls bright with the season's own colors, was like an appealing bit of old fashioned garden. As the evening progressed the little garden was taxed to capacity to accommodate those who eagerly accepted the occasion to once more press the hand of their beloved Father Zurlinden.

Vocal, piano, and violin selections were given by members of the Morgan Park Choir, by Mrs. J. Cotes ad sister of Chicago and by members of St. Michael's parish. The wistful little farewell song, written and sung by the Misses Kotrba, was especially appreciated.

Addresses were given by Rev. P. Geraghty of the Sag church, Rev. Hart of Lemont, Rev. Wm. Gorey, present pastor of St. Michael's, Rev. E. J. Zurlinden, S. J., Mr. E. Cowan and Miss Bernadette Bremner.

A trunk, silk umbrella, cuff links and a gift of money, were given to the departing pastor.

The officers of the church, of the altar society and a representative of the choir, were signally honored by being asked to sit at the table with the beloved guest, Rev. Zurlinden, and their pastor, Rev. Wm. Gorey.

Mr. E. Cowan, sponsor of the reception, has won the gratitude of the entire parish. Completely, quietly and thoroughly he worked to give the parishioners and friends the opportunity of showing their esteem for Rev. E. J. Zurlinden, S. J., who had been so hurriedly summoned from among them. Father Zurlinden, being of the Jesuit Society, will probably now devote all his time to college or university work.

Sunday, Rev. Wm. Gorey invited his congregation to view the many beautiful vestments, sacred vessels and altar linen given him by friends of Lake Forest. Some of the lovely embroidered chasubles were on exhibition at the Municipal Pier during the Eucharistic Congress.

A telephone has been installed in St. Michael's Rectory. Call 104.

last week and it is thought he had an interest in the big still raided on the Waldvogel farm east of Frankfort two weeks ago by State's Attorney Rehn.

Men who rent property to such violators are damaging their own souls and the lives of others just for the sake of a few dollars which is nothing more or less than blood money.

Some people have a jellyfish spine and say, "O well, let the young folk keep away from such places, they have no business to go in," while others characterize these joints "as necessary evils" which are truthless subterfuges used in trying to get by with their nefarious stuff.

Frankfort township has had enough of this stuff which has sullied its good name, and it is now up to the right kind of people to see that the fair name of this township is restored and that it will not be tarnished in like manner again.

Churches of Frankfort township, parents of the future citizens of this community, officials of the town what are you going to do about these conditions? SHALL THEY CONTINUE TO EXIST?

SUMMER KITCHEN BURNS ON FRANKFORT FARM

The summer kitchen on the farm of Fred Hinspeter burned to the ground about midnight Monday. The Frankfort fire engine went to the fire but could not save it as it had too good a start. The cause of the fire is unknown. The kitchen had not been used that day.

Thousands Attend Richton Pageant

The old Saulk Trail pageant which is being staged at Richton drew a crowd estimated at 10,000 last Sunday. The pageant has been in full operation all week.

Besides the forty odd Indians and the dozen buffalos there is a carnival company on the grounds to entertain the visitors.

The Indians gave their war and snake dances and re-enacted the scalping raids of their forefathers.

PALOS MEN BUY POLO PONIES

The following Palos Park business men have placed orders for polo ponies: Edward Hyink, James Kotrba, John Cavanaugh, Frank Mahaffay, Otto Schmidt, Wm. Hamblly. They expect to have their polo team in good playing order by September 15th.

OFFERS TO STAGE BENEFIT

Mr. Frank G. King of Palos Park who is the manager of "The Trouble Chasers" called in Mokena last week with a view of staging his show here for the benefit of the fire truck fund. Whether the committee will accept his proposition is not known.

WORTH CHURCH GAINING DISTINCTION

The Worth Community Church is gaining considerable recognition outside of the community, especially since the remodeling and redecoration of the church, improvement of the Chicago Southern District said it was the most worshipful church in the district, with the exception of the new St. James church in Chicago. He brought all the ministers in his district out to visit the church, so that they might gain an idea of how a church could be arranged to bring out the most worshipful effects.

Mr. Sanders has received many requests for pictures of the interior of the church and information on remodeling of old churches from men in all parts of the state.

Worth is truly a pioneer in a type of church interior that is coming rapidly in vogue.

Leap from Auto Proves Fatal to Frankfort Girl

A skull fracture suffered when she jumped from an automobile Tuesday night before it was stopped in front of her rooming house, caused the death Wednesday morning of Miss Ella Tewes, 20 years old of Frankfort.

The accident occurred in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ahrens, 513 Linden Ave., Joliet, with whom Miss Tewes made her home. She was riding in an auto driven by a friend, George P. Mason, 718 Florence Ave., Joliet.

Miss Tewes was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital in the police ambulance. Death was due to a skull fracture and she died without regaining consciousness, according to Dr. Arthur L. Shreffler, attending physician.

Mason as she alighted from a street released after being questioned by deputy sheriffs. According to the report Miss Tewes was met by Mr. Mason as he alighted from a street car on Richard street.

Just before he brought the car to a halt the girl opened the door of the coupe, and with her arms full with bundles, jumped and her head struck against the curbing.

Miss Tewes is survived by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tewes of Frankfort, a sister, Mrs. Clarence F. Hacke, of Joliet and three brothers, Bernard, Harry and Emil.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the St. Peter Evangelical church, Frankfort. Burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(By Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Julius Caesar

"NOW that you have me in your power you would be wiser to kill me than to hold me for ransom." "Why?" asked the puzzled pirate captain.

"Because," laughed the prisoner, "when I am free I shall return and kill you."

The young man who thus jested with death was small, bald and of harsh, aquiline features. He was Caius Julius Caesar, a Roman of high rank, exiled from his home city. He had fallen into the hands of Cilician pirates and his attendants had gone to seek his ransom. When they came back with it he promptly armed a fleet, returned to the place of his captivity, overcame and crucified the pirates, according to his promise.

Rome, being a republic, was for centuries swayed by two contending factions—the Patricians and the Plebeians. In the early part of the last century B. C., the city had passed under the dictation of one Sulla, whose political rival was Marius, Caesar's uncle by marriage. Sulla drove Caesar from Rome and kept him out of the city for years, during which period of exile the young man proceeded to perfect himself as a soldier, a writer, a statesman and an orator. He was destined to make marvelous use, later, of all these accomplishments.

On Sulla's death Caesar returned to Rome, receiving high office in the state. He spent the next twelve years in building up the welfare of the plain people, whose fortunes were at low ebb, and in trying to heal civil disputes and secure equality for all Roman citizens. This course made him tremendously popular with the people, even while his extravagance plunged him deep into debt. At the age of forty he formed a triumvirate (triple alliance) with two famous men, Pompey and Crassus, by which the three were virtually to share among them the sovereign power of Rome. Caesar, in the division of offices, was made governor of northern Italy, Gaul (France and Switzerland) and the Alps.

This office was no sinecure, for the provinces were swarming with insurgent tribes. For the next eight years he was constantly on the battlefield; often fighting in the front rank like a common soldier; little by little subduing all Rome's Gallic foes. He conquered Gaul, hurled the Germans back over the Rhine and made that river a Roman boundary. He crossed into Britain, and, after one repulse, conquered the country that is now England; then, as Gaul again rose in a mighty confederacy of revolution, he crushed the uprising and stemmed the tide of barbarism which would otherwise have swept over the Alps and engulfed Rome.

He kept a chronicle of his campaigns which, as "Caesar's Commentaries," has endured for nearly 2,000 years as the foremost Latin textbook for schools and a model of literary style.

Crassus died and Pompey and Caesar quarreled, thus breaking up the triumvirate. Pompey's party was in power in Rome. To weaken the great general who was becoming the people's idol, the senate, at Pompey's order, deprived Caesar of office, ordering him to give up his command at once and to return home, under penalty of a treason charge. Caesar had two courses open to him—either to obey meekly and to lose all he had gained, or to defy the order and thus render himself liable to death as an enemy to Rome. The river Rubicon divided his Gallic province from Italy. Should he cross that river under arms it would be an act of open war against Pompey.

Caesar did not hesitate. With his legion of veterans he crossed the Rubicon, thus irrevocably committing himself as Pompey's foe. Pompey, having no army sufficient to cope with him, fled, leaving the field clear to his victorious rival. Caesar, after making himself master of the Italian peninsula, returned in triumph to Rome, where he was hailed as dictator. Pompey raised an army in the East, but was beaten by Caesar (who met him with a far smaller force) and soon afterwards was murdered. Pharnaces, Asian king of Pontus, next defied Rome, and Caesar subdued him in one brief campaign, sending home this still briefer report of the victory: "I came, I saw, I conquered!"

A later conquest of Spain made Caesar master of nearly all the world. He ruled Rome justly.

But ambition wrecked him as it had many another great man. Having conquered the world he longed to be king. Rome hated the idea of a king. Mark Antony, Caesar's friend, publicly pressed royal honors on him. The people stood mute. Caesar, quick to feel the public pulse, refused the crown.

A faction rose against him, working secretly for fear of the populace. Its ringleaders, Cassius, Casca, Cimber and other demagogues and political schemers, lured Marcus Brutus, Caesar's best friend, into the conspiracy under pretext that national welfare demanded Caesar's death. In the senate, March 15, 44 B. C., the conspirators fell upon Caesar and assassinated him.

Rome's old-world greatness was due to Caesar more than to any other man

Orchard
InformationSPRAY FRUIT TO CONTROL PESTS

The peach grower who wishes to produce fruit of quality will spray his fruit to control the curculio or peach worm which causes heavy damage in all peach-growing sections.

"The curculio is a beetle which passes the winter as an adult and emerges in the spring before the fruit is set," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State College. "Just after the petals fall, the curculio lays its eggs in the young peach. The larva or worm spends about twenty days feeding in the peach, leaves the fruit and enters the soil where it changes to the pupa stage in earthen cells from one to three inches below the surface of the soil. In about ten days, this pupa emerges as an adult and is soon ready to lay eggs again."

To control this pest, Mr. Brannon advises a first application of dust or spray, when about 75 per cent of the flower petals have fallen. The spray recommended is one pound of arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water plus lime water from three pounds of stone lime. As a dust, use 5 per cent of lead arsenate and 95 per cent of lime. The second application is applied when the calyxes or shucks are shedding, or when the small peaches are exposed, using the same material.

The third application is made four weeks before each variety is due to ripen. As a spray, Mr. Brannon recommends the material as given in the first and second applications, using the self-boiled lime-sulphur (8-8-50) for diseases. The dry mixed lime-sulphur may be used in place of the self-boiled lime-sulphur, using the following dust: 80 per cent sulphur, 5 per cent lead arsenate and 15 per cent lime.

Destroy Curculio With Spray of Lead Arsenate

If the unsightly blemishes made by the apple curculio are to be avoided, a spray of one and a half pounds of powdered lead arsenate to fifty gallons of water must be applied one week after the petal-fall spray has been applied, says A. Freeman Mason, extension specialist in fruit growing, New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick. Twelve and one-half pounds of dry-mix sulphur lime should be added to this to hold later scab infections in check, and if aphids or leaf hoppers are present, three-fourths pint of 40 per cent molasses sulphate should be added in order to kill as many apple pests as possible in one application.

The curculio is a small snout beetle which feeds on young apples, and on the stone fruits. The small, round puncture made by it when feeding, or the crescent-shaped puncture in which an egg is deposited rapidly increases in size as the fruit develops. These wounds make light brown, slightly raised warts about the size of a finger nail on the mature fruit. In addition to this, a large amount of fruit in which eggs have been deposited will drop off, owing to the feeding of the maggots that have hatched from the eggs.

In orchards where russetting of the fruit or burning of the foliage has not been serious, commercial concentrated lime-sulphur at the rate of four quarts to forty gallons of water may be used in place of the dry-mix sulphur lime.

Horticultural Notes

A few fruit tree diseases require a strong spray.

For an abundance of fruit on small trees, the Compass cherry should not be overlooked.

Many mature fruit trees are carrying too much wood. The best way to prune to remedy this is a distributed thinning of the smaller branches all through the tree.

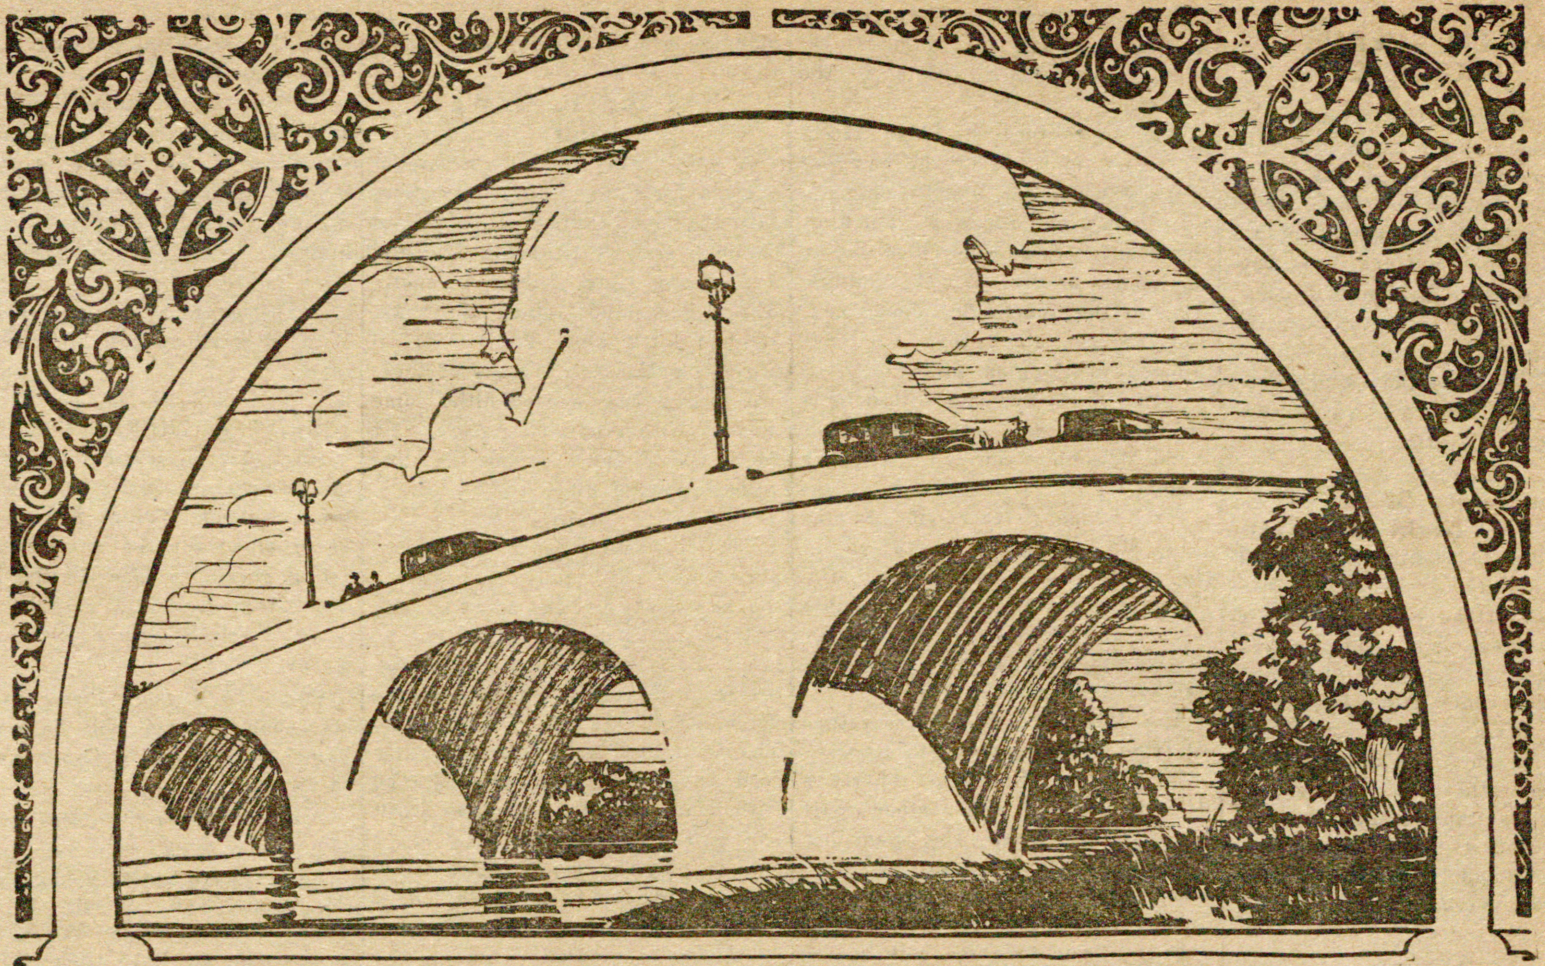

Give the trees the benefit of the doubt. A light crop will look larger as the fruit develops, and quality will largely offset quantity. Work for the sake of future crops if the present one is light.

Ordinarily one can cut red raspberries back low enough so that the cane will support the crop, but with so tall a growth a trellis is needed to keep them from bending over and resting on the ground.

If a crop of fruit is set in the orchard, work to protect it from its enemies should be started at once. This, of course, involves spraying, but one of the worst enemies of the fruit crop is dry weather.

Perhaps the most important spray for the old orchard is the one which aids in controlling scales, scab, aphids and mites. For this purpose the lime-sulphur solution is most popular.

Many orchardists apply from five to seven or eight summer sprays at intervals of about two weeks apart, in order to prevent the development of apple blotch and bitter rot and late injury by the codling moth, lesser apple worm, plum curculio, and other injurious pests.

Character and Brain

Told in Handwriting

"It is necessary to distinguish between a pretty writing and a legible one," declares Doctor Logre, a well-known Paris psychiatrist, in giving his verdict on whether a really intelligent person can have a good handwriting, "as the two qualities are not always found together. Study of manuscript suggests approximate laws, some of which are: 1, illiterate people usually have a legible, but inelegant writing (too regular, too correct); 2, fancy writing is very often a symptom of mental debility (adorned, scrolled, vain writing); 3, intellectuals who write much and rapidly, such as doctors, lawyers and writers, have a writing which is usually hard to read (easy, but indistinct, the pen chasing the alert thought, without regard to form); 4, intellectuals who are artists usually have a pretty writing (writing with a distinct personality, expressive); 5, intellectually is not the sole cause of illegible writing (carelessness, slackness and lack of discipline are also to blame)."—Chicago Daily News.

Press Time in Cairo

Cairo is a very cosmopolitan sort of place. One can tell a good deal about a city from its newspapers, and Cairo has 38. Perfumes to Cost More Grasse, France, the perfume center of Europe, with 29 distilleries, will run short of 600,000 pounds of petals this year as a result of the late frosts and inclement weather which destroyed a fifth of the Riviera flower crop. Manufacturers say this shortage will cause at least a 25 per cent increase in the cost of French perfumes.

WORTH

HARLEM AVENUE PROGRESS

Work on Harlem Avenue is progressing rapidly. Stumps and trees are being blasted out within the village limits, and the feeder bridge has been removed. 11th Street is to be widened on both sides of Harlem Avenue. Harlem, instead of turning, is to run straight south making necessary a new bridge across the canal. Soon we will have two boulevards running through Worth.

Intercommunity Stunt Night Big Event

The inter community stunt night at the church was a howling success. The Orland actors appeared upon the stage first, and the goat stunt caused a great deal of amusement, after which Palos Park came on with a mock marriage amid roars of laughter. Worth had little preparation, but managed to put on a creditable stunt. Ordinarily staid and dignified persons just broke loose and had a hilarious time, and everybody went home happy.

Moving Pictures of Muscle Shoals Shown

Pictures of Muscle Shoals and the surrounding country were shown at the village hall by Sawls & DeForest, real estate men with the idea of interesting investors in lots, in this district. There were pictures of the enormous dam, and the audience was given an idea of the wonderful resources of that section of the country. There are twenty-seven minerals within a radius of 100 miles, iron and coal in abundance, lime stone quarries, bauxite, from which aluminum is gained, gravel pits, sand, lumber, everything needed right at hand for the manufacturer of nitrates on a scale never before thought of. Most people have a hazy idea of Muscle Shoals and its possibilities but the lecture and the pictures made it realistic and impressive.

CARAHER'S BARN BURNS

The large barn on the Patrick Caraher farm, three and one half miles southwest of Worth, was destroyed by fire on the morning of July 22nd. The Worth fire department was summoned and arrived in time to save the granary and nearby buildings. Two cars, a Chevrolet recently purchased and a Buick were lost. It is believed lightning caused the blaze.

BAKERY SALE

A Bakery Sale was held at the Worth Community Church, Saturday, July 17th. Home made cakes, pies, cookies and other goodies were to be had. The sale was given by the Ladies Aid Society. About $30.00 was cleared as a result of their efforts.

LOCALS

While in swimming recently, Mrs. Henry Oberst, the Beck girls and the Wagner girls had the ill luck to have their clothes taken.

Work on the Oscar Lysens new home is progressing rapidly.

A new Ford Sedan has been purchased by Mr. John English.

Mrs. E. P. Bishop is enjoying very good health in spite of the extremely hot weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott are touring through the Northwestern section of the country.

Mr. Wm. Kittle is busy keeping the Wabash in repair so that many workers may ride in safety.

The south side seems to appeal to Mrs. Brebach and from all appearances she is enjoying her new home.

During the present busy season, Mr. William Little has secured the services of Mr. George Poorman.

Mr. Paul T. Sanders also assisted Mr. Little for a few days.

After a long siege of illness Mrs. Rosenbaum is able to get around again.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lange are prospering in their business on 11th and Harlem Avenue.

St. Luke's hospital will sadly miss the presence of Miss Ethel Stewart who has resigned from her position as stenographer in the X-Ray department. Miss Stewart has worked faithfully at the hospital for more than a year. Her plans for the future are indefinite.

R. J. Wilson and family accompanied by Kenneth Lucas motored to Crystal Lake last week. They intended to do some fishing but found it too windy, and contented themselves with viewing the beautiful scenery by the lake. They stopped at Cary and saw the famous ski slide, returning home late in the evening.

The appearance of 11th Street is greatly improved by the new coat of paint which the Worth Community Church has received. Much of the beauty of the Church is due to the efforts of Mr. W. W. Palmer. Also to the Worth fire department and the men about town who have assisted in cleaning up.

Little Joe Jelley was bitten by a dog recently and as a result has blood poisoning through his entire system.

Mr. Leonard Marrs of Kansas City, Mo., spent the week end at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Marrs. Mrs. Marrs and her mother also entertained Miss Bender of Washington, D. C., at dinner Friday evening, July 9th.

Mr. Harry P. Woods has returned from a business trip to Iowa. Miss Lillian Kaufman reports a delightful trip to the northern part of Minnesota where she spent her two weeks vacation, but as Lillian says, "There's no place like home." However, her sister Mae does not seem to agree with her as he intends to remain with her friends at Dundas for an indefinite period.

Mrs. Jennie Martin and daughter Mary left Sunday evening, July 8th for a trip to Kansas City and Brainerd, Missouri where they will visit relatives and friends.

Mrs. Myra Perry is recuperating from her recent illness at the home of her niece, Mrs. Regal of Oak Park. The latest reports are not the best.

Two weeks vacation. But, as Lillian says, "There's no place like home." However, her sister Mae does not seem to agree with her as he intends to remain with her friends at Dundas for an indefinite period.

Mr. Henry Russert was appointed to the office of traffic cop. He is stationed at 11th and Depot Streets.

Mrs. J. Peacock who is now working at the Oak Hills Golf Links, is serving as many as three or four hundred persons per day.

Her mother, Mrs. English is assisting her.

Mr. Harold Russert is very much enthused over his new position in the city.

The Young People of Worth visited the Orland M. E. Church, on Sunday, July 18th. The teachers of the Daily Vacation Bible School put on a very pleasing program after which Dr. Jewel of the Canadian Religious Education gave a talk on practical Christian standards.

Mrs. Mae's new boarders report very good lodging quarters.

Mr. Richard McEathern is now employed by Pronger Bros., who are constructing a new road near here.

Oak Lawn is to be congratulated on securing the services of Mr. I. N. Fennie as driver.

A BUDDING GENIUS HAS BEEN discovered in our midst. Kenneth Lucas, woodcarver and sculptor, his latest work of art being a bust of Abraham Lincoln. A great future lies ahead of this rising young artist.

MR. PAUL SANDERS WAS surprised by a visit from an old college chum and his wife namely, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Little, Sunday, July 18th. The young couple are residents of Batavia, Ill.

THE EDWARD VAN DEBURGS have recently changed their place of residence. Their new home is located in Palos Park.

THE GLAZERS ARE ALSO said to be enjoying their new dwelling place on Harlem Avenue, formerly the pastor's home.

IT IS SAID THAT THE F. J. Hildebrands and daughter Hazel also Mrs. E. Preller are planning an extensive motor trip through the Central and Western States. Their ultimate goal is Nebraska.

AMONG THOSE ENTERTAINING this week is Mrs. Coughlin whose sister has been staying with them for some time. Harriet Coughlin has resumed her former position as depot agent during the absence of Mrs. J. Martin.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY WAS AN important feature on the social calendar of the Young Misses of Worth. Mrs. R. J. Wilson entertained a large group in honor of her daughter, Elva. Delicious refreshments were served and followed by many new and exciting games.

Those present were: Hanna English, Mable Leipstorff, Eleanor Palmer, Elva Schroeder, Dena and Bessie Langford, Margaret and Vivian Russert and Mary, Margaret and Leah Rose Bishop.

MRS. J. LITTLE HAS RETURNED from a tour to Albert Lea,

Minn., where she was visiting with friends.

MRS. RALPH ENGLISH IS planning a short holiday at Verdon, Ill.

ATHLETIC NEWS Golf

A good many of our prominent citizens including Monroe Peterson, Ella Peterson, Clifford Tobey, Paul Sanders, Harriet Crandall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cure, Albert Crandall, Albert Soderland, Lillian Kaufman, William Little and Paul Mitchell are golf enthusiasts. Many of them are just getting started altho some finished with creditable scores last week, Cliff Tobey topping the list with a score of 80.

Tennis

The new tennis court just completed was used quite extensively the last week, and the court is rapidly improving due to the work done on it. P. C. Bishop still reigns supreme on the court but some of the young people are bound to improve. The veterans, A. J. Crandall, Clifford Tobey, Dan Crandall and Carl Bishop are soon to appear, and will endeavor to show the young chaps how to play the game. Many tough battles were fought in the old days the annual tournament arousing considerable interest. Among the younger players, Paul Mitchell shows great promise, closely followed by Kenneth Lucas and Edwin Teason. The players are very grateful to Mr. Preller for the use of his lot and to Mr. Wm. Teason for the time which he donated. Their generosity is certainly appreciated.

Fishing

Saturday the 17th, a group of our home town boys went on a fishing trip to the Des Plaines river. They made no preparation whatever, having made up their minds late Saturday night. There were 8 boys in the group; Paul Mitchell, Kenneth Lucas, Edwin and Taffy Teason, Bill and Evie Tesnow, Louie Daniels and they all slept together on Bill Tesnow's porch. In all, the boys had only a couple of hours sleep as they left about 2 A. M. They traveled by auto with high expectations of making a big catch. They fished from the shore until daylight when they obtained a couple of boats. A great time was had in the boats but very little fishing was done. They departed homeward about 9 A. M., after a sleepless night, lots of fishing, but no fish and all having a good appetite.

ORLAND

ORLAND M. E. CHURCH NOTES
Elmer L. Setterlund, Pastor.

Friday evening July 30, features Thomas Meighan in "Old Home Week." It is the story of the return to the old town and the girl he left behind.

SUNDAY AUGUST 1ST.—Bible School at 9:30 A. M. Morning worship at 10:30. Another sermon in the series on the world's greatest short stories. "The Hidden Treasure and the Pearl of Great Price" is the morning sermon. Evening service at 7:30 in charge of the young people. A special out of town speaker is a part of the program.

Friday evening August 6th, moving picture is "Clothes Make the Pirate", featuring Dorothy Gish and Leon Errol in a side splitting comedy. Also Aesop Fable comedy.

The funeral of Joseph Beagley, uncle of Mr. Wm. Beagley of Orland, was held at the Methodist church on Wednesday July 21st. The pastor of the church conducted the service. Most of the mourners were either from Chicago or Indiana. Burial took place at the Orland Cemetery.

On Friday July 23rd, Wm. Beagley, the pastor and his family, and Mrs. Betsy Austin motored to the Des Plaines camp meeting. The entire day and evening was spent at the camp ground. A real feature of the day was the lecture on Bishop Quale, now deceased, by Dr. Merton Rice, pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church of Detroit.

Dr. Rice was a life-long friend of Bishop Quale. The pastor of the Orland church thinks that this was the best biographical lecture which he has ever heard anywhere in the United States.

The speaker at the young people's service last Sunday evening, was the Rev. Paul Sanders, pastor of the Worth Community Church. He spoke on the theme "What It Means To Be A Christian". It is the greatest challenge that can come to us, difficult—but also gives life's greatest rewards.

The pastor of the Orland M. E. Church expects to exchange pulpits with the pastor of the Midlothian Union Church on Sunday morning August 8th. This will give the Orland people an opportunity to hear the well-liked preacher of the Midlothian Church.

On Sunday morning last, July 25th the pulpit was occupied by the Rev. C. C. Brown, a former Orland minister, now pastor of the First M. E. church of Salem, Indiana. Mr. Brown spoke in a most interesting way in regard to his experiences as a pastor in a Mormon territory both in Utah and Idaho.

CHRIST LUTHERAN CHURCH

Aug. 1st no services as the pastor preaches at Oak Glen and Lansing. Student Walter Schafer will be ordained for the ministry Aug. 1st at special services in the Bachelor Grove Lutheran church.

Aug. 8th English services at 10 a. m.

Aug. 15 German Picnic in the afternoon. Dinner will be served. Picnic to be held in Grove on 143rd street.

Aug. 22nd English services and communion 10 a. m.

A large number of young folk of the Orland and Worth M. E. churches leave Friday for a few days outing at Lake Geneva. They also expect to attend the Epworth League Institute now in session at New Lenox.

A number of Orland people motored to Richton to attend the big Saulk Trail pageant which is on for the rest of this week.

Considerable surveying has been done in this section and at Alpine for the new Southwest Super-High way.

Orland is all primed for the big ball game with the Mokena team to be played at Orland this Sunday. A big crowd is expected.

News Notes

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Oak Lawn, Ill.
E. A. Reese, Pastor

Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Mrs. F. Moore, and Mrs. F. Vandover chaperoned a party of sixteen Daily Vacation Bible School children on the boat trip last Friday. The trip from Jackson Park to the Municipal Pier has become very popular with the kiddies. On Monday Mrs. Walter Hopkins and Mrs. E. Shallor chaperoned another party and on Wednesday Mrs. E. Kellams supervised the trip.

Thru the courtesy of Mr. Chas. Comisky the Daily Vacation Bible School members were the guests of the White Sox at the White Sox park on Thursday.

Next Sunday, August 1st the Daily Vacation Bible School children will give a presentation of the life of Christ at 11 o'clock. There will be no Sunday School at 10 o'clock but all will join in the one service at 11 o'clock. The regular summer services are being continued every Sunday at 11 o'clock. Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Reese in his sermon on Christ and the Future made this memorable statement—"Contact with a great personality is like the contact of a copper wire with a dynamo, one somehow becomes charged with power and is willing to give that last measure of full devotion."

The parsonage is under construction and volunteer workers can be seen on the ground. Mr. Frank Harnew made the start which is half the job. Mr. Winans has been supervising the work of the foundation walls. Also he secured the superintendent of the Sproll Construction Co., to lay out the building. Mr. Hugo Hahn, a landscape gardner will give his expert advise in the laying out of whole church property, which has a frontage of 200 feet.

Forty women were guests of the Ladies Aid at Miss Kenally's last Thursday.

Minnie Harnew was missed at the D. V. B. S., this week because she went on a vacation. The junior class of which she is a member are making baskets under the direction of Mr. Kellams.

The feature of this Bible school has been the piano playing of Mrs. John Mahr. The famous hymns of the church have been taught to the children thru her playing.

Mrs. Sykes who has endeared herself to the Congregational church thru her faithful attendance and her care of her grandchildren, Arthur and Frank Lees, in going back to Toronto. The community will miss a fine personality in her leaving Oak Lawn.

Mrs. Bertha Hopkins who spent her vacation with her son, Dr. Percy Hopkins, has returned from the lake region of northern Minn.

Rotarex Electric washer

The new washing principle of the ROTAREX new type, aluminum cylinder washes clothes clean with out wear. This remarkable new development in the art of laundering combines first, the suction action of vacuum washers; second, the effect of the rocker motion that prevent winding of the clothes, and third, the alternate lifting and dousing that reproduces perfectly the hand method of washing with out rubbing recommended by every maker of fine fabrics.

In the big, ten pound aluminum ROTAREX cylinder the clothes glide without friction over a glassy surface that is free from perforations. The cleansing suds are suctioned into the self-reversing, revolving cylinder through numerous holes in its two ENDS or HEADS. It is the only washer made that does not wash back into the clothes the same dirt that is washed out of them.

Elsinore, Hamlet's Town, Is 500 Years Old

Elsinore, the Danish city of Hamlet, recently held an elaborate festival to celebrate the five hundredth anniversary of the granting of the charter. Pageants recalling the history of the town were acted in the courtyard of Kronborg castle, where the "Taming of the Shrew" was also presented. This picture shows nuns following the effigy of a saint which is being carried by mail-clad knights.

Above is pictured E. R. Armstrong, chief engineer of the Dupont company, with the elaborate model of his proposed seadrome, which he believes would solve the problem of transatlantic aerial travel. The drydock would serve as a midocean harbor for ships and dirigibles which could land on the dock. In the model he uses a replica of the S. S. DESIGNS FOR LATE SUMMER;
ALLURING CHIFFON FROCKS

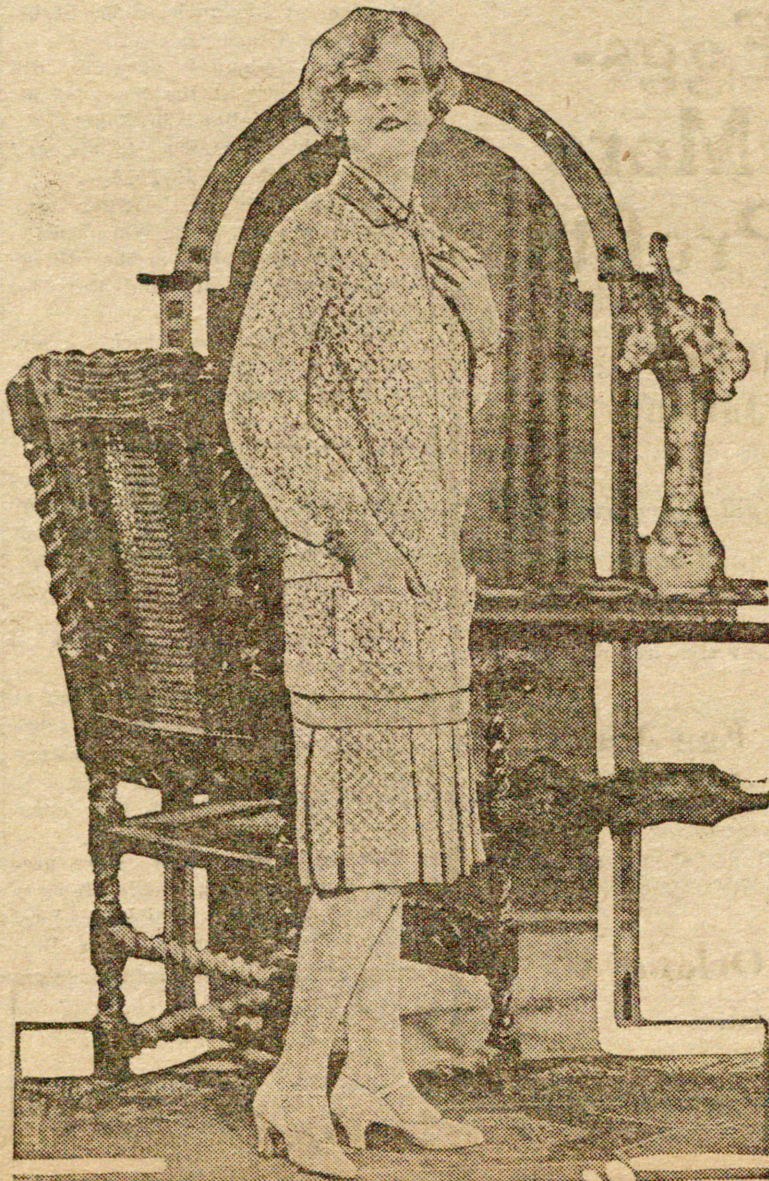

THE two-piece mode—youthful and practical as it is, has taken the world of fashion by storm. It is as popular as bobbed hair and almost as varied as millinery. All that designers have to do, to maintain interest in the two-piece frock until the end of summer, is to think up new tricks of decoration or unusual and beautiful color management or novel fabric combinations.

In the altogether charming two-piece dress shown here, the note of novelty appears in the combination of printed crepe and cut-out linen. In which the dress portion is made of the figured crepe with bandings of of fashionable cut. They make a foot-wear outfit that proves unexcelled with summer frocks.

Now that midsummer is here, the fluttering type of frock grows popular, with cape backs, wings, scarfs, panels, sashes and tiers coquetting with every little vagrant breeze that blows. In colors green, white and black combinations and all white are the coolest looking, but even in red the sheer fabrics worn look cool and many chanel red frocks in georgette are shown for late summer.

When the talk is of chiffon frocks it is to be taken for granted that it includes those made of georplain crepe. The printed silk adds one more to the myriad dotted patterns in dots that are in vogue. One color and are arranged in a plaid pattern with some of the dots centered by smaller ones. The skirt has four wide plaits across the front and two at each side, and the plain crepe banding is in the color of the dot. There are many color combinations that would be attractive in this dress, as grey, green, blue or red dots on a white ground. The banding at the top of the plaits is novel and has the effect of shortening the skirt. The linen jacket is bound at the bottom with the dotted crepe and has a belt of it across the back. The collar and since these exquisite, twin-sister fabrics are so much alike that what is about one is true at the other. Midsummer brings them into full bloom in gowns that float through afternoons and evenings and are as decorative as flowers. There is a craze for delicate materials and dark, plain colors in tailored styles, or light colors in sports styles are liable to be encountered at any time of day when hot weather arrives.

Just one more of those pretty, printed chiffon frocks that prove so flattering to their wearers has had its picture made for the benefit of those who wish to liven up their wardrobes with something new for midcuffs combine dotted and plain crepe and the novel tie is made of cord covered with the plain crepe. Down each side of the pockets are small pearl buttons, set close together and the front of the jacket has a narrow binding of plain crepe. This pretty frock has more than novelty to recommend it for it is an elegant affair, in every way chic and dainty. This effect might be ruined by the wrong choice in footwear, but it is enhanced by white silk hose and white kid slippers summer. One glance shows its fitness for whatever the afternoon or evening may bring to pass in the way of entertainment. These joyous printed patterns in georgette or chiffon rarely employ trimming, but occasionally a plain color, matching some color in the printed pattern, is used in bandings and sometimes a little lace is adroitly introduced in their construction. Quite a number of models incorporate the cape and its modifications, as a part of the ensemble, and often it is cleverly managed to partly cover the arms. In the gown pictured the debonaire cavalier cape is detachable and has flat ties made of the chiffon. The frock has a long bodice and a full rippled skirt. Its new feature is the wide, crushed girdle, also made of the chiffon and fastening at the left side.

Comparatively few frocks are short-sleeved, but wing treatments and capes that extend over the arms and terminate at the sides of the bodice are rivals of the long-sleeved modes. Many neck lines are "V" shaped and very new collars are convertible—that is, they are high at the back and form revers when open at the front. But they are edged with a narrow flat fold that is extended into long tie ends, so they may be turned up about the throat with the ties wound once about the neck.

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs.

Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results from its use." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight, I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. My condition made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask him, 'How is housekeeping?' and he says, 'It is just like being in Heaven!' Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?"

Records on Bamboo

The folklore of the poor Malay people in Sumatra, according to Prof. H. H. Bartlett, of the Smithsonian institution, is preserved on joints of bamboo. While studying rubber-producing plants in that country, Professor Bartlett became interested in the custom which the natives practice of writing their fables, legends and accounts of magical and medicinal uses

Tiger Drops in on Hotel

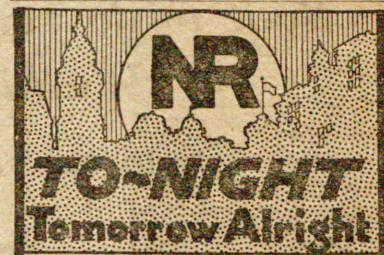

A big tiger, being shipped to Singapore on its way to the New York zoo, escaped from its cage on a freight train in the Federated Malay states and trotted into a hotel near the station. Several persons playing billiards made a hasty exit, says Harold T. Wilkins in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The tiger, as frightened as the billiard players, sought refuge under a table. A sportsman shot and killed it.

NARROW ESCAPE

Synopsis.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree has his first meeting with an enemy, Papayuchew (young owl). Fighting hard, the antagonists are suddenly plunged into a swollen creek. Badly buffeted, and half drowned, Baree is finally flung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost, lonely and hungry. For many days his life is one of fear and distress. He meets various creatures of the wild and goes through a thunderstorm. He is learning more and more. He strays into the trapping grounds of Pierrot and Nepeese. Nepeese wounds Baree with a rifle, but he escapes. Baree recovers and learns nature's secrets rapidly. Nepeese is determined to catch Baree and tame him and tries again.

Baree darted to one side and ran for the open meadow. Wakayoo did not stir as Baree sped past him—no more than if he had been a bird or a rabbit. Then came another breath of air, heavy with the scent of man. This, at last, put life into him. He turned and began lumbering after Baree into the meadow trap. Baree, looking back, saw him coming—and thought it was pursuit. Nepeese and Pierrot came over the slope, and at the same instant they saw Wakayoo and Baree.

When they entered into the grassy dip under the rock walls, Baree turned sharply to the right. Here was a great boulder, one end of it tilted up off the earth. It looked like a splendid hiding place, and Baree crawled under it.

But Wakayoo kept straight ahead into the meadow.

From where he lay Baree could see what happened. Scarcely had he crawled under the rock when Nepeese and Pierrot appeared through the break in the dip, and stopped. The fact that they stopped thrilled Baree. They were afraid of Wakayoo! The big bear was two-thirds of the way across the meadow. The sun fell on him, so his coat shone like black satin. Pierrot did not kill for the love of killing. Necessity made him a conservationist. But he saw that in spite of the lateness of the season, Wakayoo's coat was splendid—and he raised his rifle.

Baree saw this action. He saw, a moment later, something spit from the end of the gun, and then he heard that deafening crash that had come with his own hurt, when the Willow's bullet had burned through his flesh. He turned his eyes swiftly to Wakayoo. The big bear had stumbled; he was on his knees; and then he struggled up and lumbered on.

The roar of the rifle came again, and a second time Wakayoo went down. Pierrot could not miss at that distance. Wakayoo made a splendid mark. It was slaughter; yet for Pierrot and Nepeese it was business—the business of life.

Baree was shivering. It was more from excitement than fear, for he had lost his own fear in the tragedy of these moments. A low whine rose in his throat as he looked at Wakayoo, who had risen again and faced his enemies—his jaws gaping, his head swinging slowly, his legs weakening under him as the blood poured through his torn lungs. Baree whined—because Wakayoo had fished for him, because he had come to look on him as a friend, and because he knew it was death that Wakayoo was facing now. There was a third shot—the last. Wakayoo sank down in his tracks. His big head dropped between his forepaws. A racking cough or two came to Baree. And then there was silence.

It was slaughter—but business. A minute later, standing over Wakayoo, Pierrot said to Nepeese: "Mon Dieu, but it is a fine skin, Sakahet! It is worth twenty dollars over at Lac Bain!"

He drew forth his knife and began whetting it on a stone which he carried in his pocket. In these minutes Baree might have crawled out from under his rock and escaped down the canyon; for a space he was forgotten. Then Nepeese thought of him, and in that same strange, wondering voice she spoke again the word "Baree."

Pierrot, who was kneeling, looked up at her.

"Oul, Sakahet. He was born of the wild. And now he is gone—"

The Willow shook her head.

"Non, he is not gone," she said, and her dark eyes quested the sunlit meadow.

As she quested the ragged edges of the little meadow for signs of the dog-pup, her thoughts flashed back swiftly. Two years ago they had buried her princess mother under the tall spruce near their cabin. That day Pierrot's sun had set for all time, and her own life was filled with a vast loneliness. There had been three at the graveside that afternoon as the sun went down—Pierrot, herself, and a dog, a great, powerful husky with a white star on his breast and a white-tipped ear. He had been her dead mother's pet from puppyhood—her bodyguard, with her always, even with his head resting on the side of her bed as she died. And that night, the night of the day they buried her, the dog had disappeared. He had gone as quietly and as completely as her spirit. No one ever saw him after that. It was strange, and to Pierrot it was a miracle. Deep in his heart he was filled with the wonderful conviction that the dog had gone with his beloved Wyola into heaven.

But Nepeese had spent three winters at the Missioner's school at Nelson house. She had learned a great deal about white people and the real God, and she knew that Pierrot's thought was impossible. She believed that her mother's husky was either dead or had joined the wolves. Probably he had gone to the wolves. So—was it not possible that this youngster she and her father had pursued was of the flesh and blood of her mother's pet? It was more than possible. The white star on his breast, the white-tipped ear—the fact that he had not bitten her when he might easily have buried his fangs in the soft flesh of her arms! She was convinced. While Pierrot skinned the bear, she began hunting for Baree.

Baree had not moved an inch from under his rock. He lay like a thing stunned, his eyes fixed steadily on the scene of the tragedy out in the meadow. He had seen something that he would never forget—even that he would never quite forget his mother and Kazan and the old windfall. He had witnessed the death of the creature he had thought all-powerful. Wakayoo, the big bear, had not even put up a fight. Pierrot and Nepeese had killed him without touching him; now Pierrot was cutting him with a knife which shot silvery flashes in the sun; and Wakayoo made no movement. It made Baree shiver, and he drew himself an inch farther back under the rock, where he was already wedged as if he had been shoved there by a strong hand.

He could see Nepeese. She came straight back to the break through which his flight had taken him, and stood at last not more than twenty feet from where he was hidden. Now that she stood where he could not escape, she began weaving her shining hair into two thick braids. Baree had taken his eyes from Pierrot, and he watched her curiously. He was not afraid now. His nerves tingled. In him a strange and growing force was struggling to solve a great mystery—the reason for his desire to creep out from under his rock and approach that wonderful creature with the shining eyes and the beautiful hair. Nepeese was looking about her. She was smiling. For a moment her face was turned toward him, and he saw the white shine of her teeth, and her beautiful eyes seemed glowing straight at him.

And then, suddenly, she dropped on her knees and peered under the rock.

Their eyes met. For at least half a minute there was not a sound. Nepeese did not move, and her breath came so softly that Baree could not hear it.

Then she said, almost in a whisper: "Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!"

It was the first time Baree had heard his name, and there was something so soft and assuring in the sound of it that in spite of himself the dog in him responded to it in a whisper that just reached the Willow's ears. Slowly she stretched in an arm. It was bare and round and soft. He might have darted forward the length of his body and buried his fangs in it easily. But something held him back. He knew that it was not an enemy; he knew that the dark eyes shining at him so wonderfully were not filled with the desire to harm—and the voice that came to him softly was like a strange and thrilling music.

"Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!"

Over and over again the Willow called to him like that, while on her face she tried to draw herself a few inches farther under the rock. She could not reach him. There was still a foot between her hand and Baree, and she could not wedge herself in an inch more. And then she saw where on the other side of the rock there was a hollow, shut in by a stone. If she had removed the stone, and come in that way—

She drew herself out and stood once more in the sunshine. Her heart thrilled. Pierrot was busy over his bear—and she would not call him. She made an effort to move the stone which closed in the hollow under the big boulder, but it was wedged in tightly. Then she began digging with a stick. If Pierrot had been there, his sharp eyes would have discovered the significance of that stone, which was not larger than a water pail. Possibly for centuries it had lain there, its support keeping the huge rock from toppling down, just as an ounce-weight may swing the balance of a wheel that weighs a ton.

Five minutes—and Nepeese could move the stone. She tugged at it. Inch by inch she dragged it out until at last it lay at her feet and the opening was ready for her body. She looked again toward Pierrot. He was still busy, and she laughed softly as she untied a big red-and-white Bay handkerchief from about her shoulders. With this she would secure Baree. She dropped on her hands and knees and then lowered herself flat on the ground and began crawling into the hollow under the boulder.

Baree had moved. With the back of his head flattened against the rock, he had heard something which Nepeese had not heard; he had felt a slow and growing pressure, and from this pressure he had dragged himself slowly—and the pressure still followed. The mass of rock was settling! Nepeese did not see or hear or understand. She was calling to him more and more pleadingly:

"Baree—Baree—Baree—"

Her head and shoulders and both arms were under the rock now. The glow of her eyes was very close to Baree. He whined. The thrill of a great and impending danger stirred in his blood. And then—

In that moment Nepeese felt the pressure of the rock on her shoulder, and into the eyes that had been glowing softly at Baree there shot a sudden wild look of horror. And then there came from her lips a cry that was not like any other sound Baree had ever heard in the wilderness—wild, piercing, filled with agonized fear. Pierrot did not hear that first cry. But he heard the second and the third—and then scream after scream as the Willow's tender body was slowly crushed under the settling mass. He ran toward it with the speed of the wind. The cries were weaker—dying away. He saw Baree as he came out from under the rock and ran into the canyon, and in the same instant he saw a part of the Willow's dress and her moccasined feet. The rest of her was hidden under the death-trap. Like a madman Pierrot began digging. When a few moments later he drew Nepeese out from under the boulder she was white and deathly still. Her eyes were closed. His hand could not feel that she was living, and a great moan of anguish rose out of his soul. But he knew how to fight for a life. He tore open her dress and found that she was not crushed as he had feared. Then he ran for water. When he returned, the Willow's eyes were open and she was gasping for breath.

"The blessed saints be praised!" sobbed Pierrot, falling on his knees at her side. "Nepeese, ma Nepeese!"

She smiled at him, with her two hands on her bare breast, and Pierrot hugged her up to him, forgetting the water he had run so hard to get.

Still later, when he got down on his knees and peered under the rock, his face turned white and he said:

"Mon Dieu, if it had not been for that little hollow in the earth Nepeese—"

He shuddered, and said no more. But Nepeese, happy in her salvation made a movement with her hand and said, smiling at him:

"I would have been like—that. Ah, mon pere, I hope I shall never have a lover like that rock!"

Pierrot's face darkened as he bent over her.

"Non!" he said fiercely. "Never!"

He was thinking again of McTaggart, the factor at Lac Bain, and his hands clenched while his lips softly touched the Willow's hair.

Will Baree finally come under the domination of Nepeese?

Finns' Double Christmas

For centuries before the year 1772 the people of Finland had four Christmas holidays, but a Swedish royal decree issued that year abolished the third and fourth, as it was thought desirable to curtail the festival in the interest of work. But the Finns still have two Christmas holidays, December 25 and 26 (St. Stephen's day).

Lesson for August 1

DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song and he is become my salvation.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Takes Care of the Children of Israel.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Israel Saved at the Red Sea.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Nation of Slaves Was Set Free.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Divine and Human Leadership.

I. Israel in Straitened Circumstances (vv. 1-12).

1. Going out of the land of Egypt (13:18).

The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The Israelites went out from Egypt on their way to the promised land with a high hand. Through the land of the Philistines the journey would have been comparatively short, but God commanded them to turn from that way lest going through the land of the Philistines they would see war and desire to turn back to Egypt. The way of the wilderness was a longer route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this way they escaped the experiences of war which would have come to them at the hand of the Philistines, but they learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:12).

2. Hemmed in (vv. 1-3).

At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a great difficulty. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. However, they should have been encouraged because the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them the way and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (13:21, 22).

3. Pursued by Pharaoh (vv. 4-12).

The stricken Egyptians had now recovered from their sorrow, and perceiving the straitened circumstances of the Israelites they interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent them from leaving the country.

II. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (vv. 13-22).

Though they were in a straitened condition they had no reason to fear, for the Lord had led them there. There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them into this particular place.

1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto Me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." The lifting up of the rod simply served as something tangible upon which their faith could act. They were to go forward a step at a time without raising any question as to the outcome, for from the source from which came the command, came the power to obey.

2. To lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians.

Those who will not heed the warning judgments of God may be allowed to go to their destruction under the presumption that the Almighty is helping them.

III. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 23-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dry shod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels, which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of the Egyptians. They attributed it all to God. All self-consciousness and importance were left out. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb." (Rev. 15:3).

New England Woman

of Advanced Ideas

In his book, "Some American Ladies," Meade Minnerode pays this tribute to an early American wife:

"Abigail Adams, wife of President John Adams, was one of America's first feminists, for she told her husband she thought women should have a share in the government and, because of her wise advice on political questions, he himself acclaimed her as a 'stateswoman.' This simple but shrewd New England woman most brilliantly acquitted herself at foreign courts, winning half his battles for her ambassador husband before Adams became President.

"How careful she had to be, how tactful, how gracious, how dignified, how unfailingly watchful," remarks the writer, "that they never were made to appear ridiculous, must have been due, in a large measure, to her own intelligence and good sense, to her breeding and to her faultless instinct—this Puritan lady who was so afraid of appearing awkward."

Church Members Increase

The number of church members in America increased 800,000 during 1925. Methodists lead the increase. There are now 46,883,000 church members of a population of 116,000,000.

Women in England

Because British schoolmasters voted that no male teacher should take orders from a woman principal, the woman teachers of England are up in arms. Their national union termed the action of the men as "sex warfare" and declared they would battle out the issue to the finish.

A Little Thing

"Do you think there is really anything between Jane and Peter?"
"Only Peter's wife!"

Keep It Quiet

He (passionately)—I tell you my love for you is making me mad—mad—mad!

She (calmly)—Well, keep quiet about it. It's had the same effect on my father.—Answers.

The things that come to those who wait are seldom what they started in to wait for.

Art hath an enemy called ignorance.—Johnson.

3 o'clock in the morning - no sleep yet!

INSURE your sleep against the pest of mosquitoes and early morning flies. Spray Flit.

Flit spray clears your home in a few minutes of disease-bearing flies and mosquitoes. It is clean, safe and easy to use.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.

Mrs. M. L. Brenner is driving a new Ford Sedan and Mrs. George B. Ward is driving a new Franklin. Our sympathy goes out to Mrs. Edward Hyink who has recently lost her mother.

The Vacation Bible School opened in the Palos Improvement Club House Monday morning, July 26th, with 24 pupils. More children are expected as the school becomes more widely advertised.

The school is divided into four classes. The kindergarten in charge of Miss Ruth Mitchell; the primary under Miss Marjorie Traub and the junior and intermediate classes are taught by Rev. Forry, Lois Hyink, Ethelyn Mahaffay and Billy Mahaffay are assistants in the work of the school. The sessions run from 9 a. m., to 12 noon daily and will extend over a period of three weeks, the closing day to be marked with an evening demonstration of the work. Each session opens with a period of worship, followed by a Bible story, a character story, memory work, including both song and rhyme memory work, hand work and organized play.

The teaching is carried on in accordance with the approved psychological methods of teaching a child thru dramatization; by stimulating his interest, and by play, and it is amazing how much they learn during the short period of the school. Those who attended the demonstration exercises last summer actually gasped as they heard the junior group repeat without hesitation the names of all the books of the Bible. Probably not a half a dozen adults in the audience could have done the same. And this was just one very small part of their accomplishments. The children go to the Bible School not because they are compelled to go, but because they want to go, and they want to go badly enough to give up three weeks from their school vacation to do so. It would be worth while for all parents and yes, grade school teachers too, to observe the methods used in the Bible school and learn how to make the teaching of children, not a series of disagreeable enforced tasks and antagonisms, but a joy to the teachers and the taught.

The News-Bulletin is going to run a series of articles on interesting people of Palos and will start the series in the next issue with sketch on Prof. Martin Sprengling, president of the Palos Improvement Club

Last Saturday Mrs. Margaret Schmidt with her children and grand children held a family reunion in the woods of the old homestead known as Brookside Farm.

Relatives also were present from Beecher, Grant Park, Sollitt and Chicago Heights and helped to make it a jolly occasion. After a beautiful dinner of which all partook with a healthy appetite, baseball and other games were enjoyed until evening, when all departed agreeing that all had a merry time.

How Can I be A Christian?

The Orland Young People are holding a series of meetings each Sunday evening dealing with Christian service. Sunday evening, Aug. 1st and the 8th Mr. Karl R. Stoltz, who has charge of Biblical Literature and Religious Education at the Y. M. C. A. College will speak on the subject "The Meaning of Being a Christian."

We cordially invite the people of the neighboring towns to meet with us in these soul inspiring services. All of these special meetings are undenominational. Time 7:30 standard time.
